Berinstein has been at Columbia for six years and was graduated from Columbia College two years ago. The other two have been there for four years and throughout their entire course the three blind men have asked no favors and resived none, taking the regular classroom work instruction with their classmates and passing the same examinations, the only difference being that the examinan questions were read to the blind men and they were allowed to typewrite answers on their machines. Otherwise their courses at Columbia have been exactly the same as that of any normal student.

What has made their row harder is that each has been more or less dependent pon himself for his maintenance while in the university, and each has tried to were eke out a siender income by doing private tutoring and any other work that came his way. PHILADELPHIA, May 22.-Peter A. B. Widener, father of George D. Widener and grandfather of Harry Elkins Widener, who were lost on the Titanic, will build a wing to the Harvard library building to house the Harry Elkins Widener collection of rare books which young Widener willed to Harvard. This was announced to-day by Dr. Rosenbach of this city, who aided Widener in collecting the rare

No definite plans will be made for the wing for at least two weeks, said Dr. Rosenbach to-day. Mr. Widener, however, told Dr. Rosenbach several days ago Robert Howland Orton, 43 years old, died that since the equipment at Harvard would not permit the installation of the collection he would build the wing him-
